

LOCAL MATTERS.

Mr. Hedges arrived from La Paz on Sunday. His recess, from business, during two months seems to have acted favorably, as he returns to us a personation of "six feet one way, three feet t'other."

We wish the ice-cream saloon of Leopoldo Carrillo every success, even if it is not advertised. Ice-cream is a rare luxury in a climate where snow never falls and, where, in the summer season, the thermometer ranges upward of 110° in shade.

House Thieves—By letter from Arizona City we learn that seven animals were stolen from a government train, at Visita, on the night of the 2d inst. A party of Indians, sent in pursuit on the following morning, killed the thieves and recovered the stock.

"El Dia de San Juan" (St. John's Day) was celebrated by the Mexican portion of our population, on Thursday. The principal feature of the celebration consisted in feats of horsemanship.

Whiskey—A slight misunderstanding growing out of a "drunk," at Adamsville, Gila valley, on the 12th inst., resulted in the breaking of a man's arm and the bursting of his head by repeated blows from a club in the hands of another. We have not learned the names of the parties.

"Gassy Green," we are informed, is making war upon the sons of the forest resident at Arizona City. He sent one, who threatened him with a knife, to prospect the happy hunting ground. G. G. is deputy constable at Arizona City and is considered justifiable in having shot Lo who was drunk and disorderly and would not suffer himself to be arrested.

Gov. Safford reached Yuma on the 15th inst. and will probably arrive at Tucson before the expiration of the coming week. The Governor, it would appear, wishes to take us by surprise as no one has received information of the day upon which he may be expected. However, our citizens will hold themselves in readiness to hail his advent. Our old friend, A. Lyon, Esq., will accompany the Governor from Yuma.

Killed—News was brought to town on Wednesday, that Jose Jaramillo, who left this city on the 14th inst., for Mesilla, was killed by Indians, at Soldiers' Farewell, on the 19th. Don Jaramillo brought a stock of goods to this place, some four months ago, and having disposed of it was on his return to the Rio Grand. He must have had a considerable amount of money about his person.

Stranger's Affair—Mr. Flourney—firm of Hayden and Flourney—of this city, had been drinking freely of strong liquors for some time past, and, on Wednesday night last, he arose from his bed and, in a half nude condition, mounted a horse and rode away. A party of men went in search of him on the following morning and has not yet returned. The direction which he took, as indicated by a trail discovered by some Mexicans, is toward the mountains west of the valley.

Wonders—If a "green one" from the east were to visit the metropolis of Arizona, at present, he would find many things entirely beyond his comprehension. It would be a rich joke to take an individual of this class upon the eminence of the southern suburb of Tucson, and, after having pointed out to him the broad green valley of the Santa Cruz, call upon him to explain the cause of these hundred columns of dust which continually rise and fall throughout its whole area. Accustomed, at home, to machinery in every department of labor, he would look consternation when informed that the Mexican farmer thrashes out his grain by running horses and mules over it, that he cleanses it from chaff and straw by blowing it into the air by the shovel-full, and that the "columns of dust" which cause him to stare are occasioned by this latter operation.

Industrious—The American Indian has long been proverbial in point of laziness and, as a man, is, no doubt, entitled to distinction in this respect. Yet, it is unjust to denounce the race collectively; for while the man is perhaps, the laziest, most worthless and despicable of the human family, the woman is a very pattern of worth and industry within her sphere. The Papagoes of the Santa Cruz valley give an instance of this: Their women are constantly on the streets selling coarse earthenware and salt manufactured by themselves, and which they carry in baskets, upon their heads, in quantities varying in weight from 60 to 90 pounds. Another form of industry consists in the collecting of whatever seeds may happen to remain upon fields from which crops have been gathered. This is done by picking up with the fingers, by grain, and tedious though the task be, we have, nevertheless, seen several sacks filled with barley collected in this manner.

By a letter from Florence, under date of June 14, we learn that harvesting is the whole excitement. Messrs. Ruggles and Ewing have finished the gathering in of their immense crops and are awaiting the arrival, from Phoenix, of a thrashing machine to thrash out and fit their barley for market. "Florence," it says, "is not improving very rapidly at present, yet there is considerable talk about building so soon as labor can be procured, but, at present, laborers are very scarce." The vital question with Florence is the opening, at an early day, of the new road to Tucson. This done, a transit route from northern to southern Arizona, by way of Florence, will be shorter by some fifty miles than the route now traveled. The people of Florence are particularly anxious to have this road opened and will do their part toward its construction so soon as their crops shall have been secured.

METEOROLOGICAL—The following table shows the temperature of the climate of Tucson, from the 16th to the 22d inst., as measured by the thermometer in shade:—

16	94.33	108.
